Dry Flies In Forest Sami Country

-this will be a place that warms your heart

Join us on a very special nature and fishing trip. We will travel far up into the alpine world seeking the large brown trout found far up in this lovely forest river.

The goal of our long journey is a valley that still retains its naturally lovely wilderness flavour, one of the last in Lapland. Here the alpine landscape opens up with rounded low fell extensions tied to the Sarek massif. At its western end we are almost at the high, snow-covered mountain tops. In order to reach this difficult river, you pass the Udtja forest Sami village, the last in this area and one of the few remaining in Sweden. Along the road we also see the childhood home of the well-known Sami artist Lars Pirak.

Farther along we pass the mighty south peak Farforita, a 4 kilometre long ridge with landslip precipices dropping some 200 metres straight down well worth recording photographically.

Once we approach the Lillseleforsen rapids we step ashore for some fishing along the 10 kilometre stretch of the forest river. In our moccasins we quietly seek large brown trout in the many holes, nooks and crannies of both calm and running river sections. In late autumn evenings brown trout weighing several kilograms are not unusual. It is even possible to hook large grayling here by drifting downstream. When you're seeking a hard bite from a large grayling, walking a greased Caddis fly along the rapid ripples is definitely among the favourites.

Still just sitting quietly at the river's edge watching the waves as the fish breach through the smooth water is an enjoyment enough. It is almost as if the bewitching fog still rests on the reindeer paths and the thunder from their hooves is still heard as once it was. A bit upstream we find the remains of the old cult site Haltetievva that once was the portal between summer and winter lands for the Sami and their reindeer.

As we find ourselves in Sami country our food comprises various superb Sami dishes fixed throughout the day on the open fire. Each is heavenly delicacies hungry fly fishers.

Since it is so hard to reach, this valley has been able to retain its wilderness character. No fly fisher should miss a visit to this observer and fishing paradise, to this land where nature is at its mightiest.

Guide's fly fishing equipment:

On still days I use my 10# or 11# Class 6 single-handed rods. "Fast action" - windy days, I prefer my 10# Class 7 or 8: a single-handed "Super fast action" rod.

I use a floating WF line with a loop braided system, then leaders with different sink rates. Orvis Mirage fluorocarbon tippet material from 0.10 mm to 0.22 mm for the largest flies.

This is my way to fish, and is only a suggestion of suitable fly fishing equipment. You of course can use what is most natural to you what you are most comfortable to fish with.
